Current Comment

Now that the entire country including Congress and the various state and local administrations seems to be getting around to the point where economy is freely admitted to be a good thing, it might not be out of place to remind ourselves that one of the best ways to reduce public expenditures would be to cut down the number of boards and commissions which seem to make it their business to pry into everybody's business

For example: in speaking recently of the Kelly-Davis bill for the purpose of setting up a federal coal commission, Senator Moses of New Hampshire, said:

"I think of it only as adding a new bureau to that of a furniture shop which we have already set up in which weird devices thrust the government into doing for the community do for itself. It is another of the measures to regulate the private life of the citizen. What an individual used to do for himself and took much satisfaction in doing now has passed on to a paid public officer.

"Once a mother saw to it that her offspring brushed his teeth and washed behind the ears. Now a school nurse is paid to do it. The individual looks to the community, the comunity to the legislature, and the legislature to the Congress, with the result that no one here present, no matter how law abiding, can lay his head on his pillow at night without having violated some law, even in his most circumspect day. If a law had been passed as sponsored by a legislator of my state, the individual would have been compelled to sleep eight hours a day."

During our days of prosperity the people seemed to pay litle attention to mounting taxes, increased public expenditures and the growth of boards and commissions. But now that the depression is upon us they are beginning to awaken, and if the ball can be started rolling in the opposite direction, tc the ultimate elimination of ninety per cent of the nuisances, the depression may yet be worth what it is costing us.

Supporters of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt for the Democratic nomination for the presidency are said to have been considerably heartened by the statement that Senator Norris, of Nebraska, Progressive Republican, would support the New York governor if he becomes the choice of the Democratic convention.

To the neutral observer it would seem, however, that the endorsement of Senator Norris might be a two-edged sword. It is to be admitted that Senator Norris seems to have a firm hold on the Nebraska electorate, so far as his own political fortunes are concerned, but it is also to be pointed out that he seems to be unable to utilize this firm hold inthe interest of any other candidate. For example, Senator Norris endorsed Al Smith in 1928 and threw cold chills down the spines af some of the weak-kneed brethen in the Republican ranks. But Nebraska did not go for Al Smith, and neither did any of the other states which might have been influenced by Senator Norris' brand of progressivism.

The fact is that Governor Rossevelt's weakest situation is in the more or less conservative east, and not in the progressive west where Senator Norris might give him some aid. And the reason many of the eastern Democratic leaders are cool to Governor Roosevelt, is because of the fact that they suspect that h is in sympathy with some of the radical views which Senator Norris espouses. Therefore, the endorsment of Senator Norris is calculated to weaken Governor Roosevelt before the Democratic convention in the east where he needs help, as well as to help him in the west, where he is getting along pretty well anyhow.

Of course, Governor Roosevelt still has the edge so far as the Demoocratic race is concerned, but his campaign has slowed down somewhat since he lost California. In the meantime the Massachusetts Democratic hosts are planning to go to Chicago in a solid Smith special train, just as they went to Houston in 1928 in a solid Smith train. The prospect for fun and excitement in the Democratic convention is growing.

FRANK T. LANNIN THROWS HAT IN ASSEMBLY RING

Announcing his candidacy for assemblyman from the 20th district is Frank. T. Lannin, farmer, builder, and business man.

Two years ago Mr. Lannin lost by a narrow margin to the Hon. T. M. Wright, and the narrowness of the margin was so infinitesimal that Mr. Lannin believes himself and his ideals sufficiently popular to again offer them to the public. Among the planks of his platform, to pick at random, are:

"If elected I will not consider the election a personal victory, but rather an order from my fellow citizens to go forth and do battle for a new deal in politics and legislation.

"The immediate halting of the ever increasing extravagance in governmental costs brought about by the thousands of new bills passed by each succeeding legislature, and reducing them to a per capita cost in keeping with the ability of the people to pay.

"A free and open public school door with a system put on a business basis wherein outside aid would relieve the local taxpayers of some of the costs.

"Solution of this valley's water problem on a 'pay as you go' plan without a bond issue."

LETTER FROM CIVIC GROUP TO UNION HI SCHOOL BOARD

Campbell, California
May 13, 1932

To the Trustees of the Campbell Union High School District.

Wilbur Mitchell,, Secretary.

The Directors of the Campbell Chamber of Commerce in special meeting assembled, wish you to know that we are definitely opposed to any DRASTIC cut in the budget of the High School.

We understand that there is a movement to cut the budget 40 per cent. It is unthinkable that you would take favorable action on this movement, which would demoralize the school and cause irreparable damage.

We have every confidence in your ability to handle this situation and you to know that we will back you for the best interest of the school with all the power we possess.

H. M. Shadle, President
A. S. Buell, Secretary

Norfolk Boat Builder Confesses Cruel Hoax in Lindbergh Case—Terrible Tragedy at Sea—Gossip of National Politics.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

BREAKING down under long continued examination, John H. Curtis, the Norfolk boat builder who had put himself forward as an intermediary in the Lindbergh baby case, confessed to Inspector Harry Walsh of the Jersey City police that his story was a hoax and "negotiations" with the kidnapers were entirely a fake. He said he never knew such persons as those he named to Colonel Lindbergh and to meet whom the distracted father made many trips to sea on a yacht in company with Curtis. In his brief written confession of his cruel swindle Curtis said he "became insane on the subject for the time being, which caused me to create the story in its entirety," and that he was "brought back to his senses" by a telephone conversation with his wife.

W. H. Stevens

Curtis' activities the night of the kidnaping were being investigated. He was locked up and later arraigned on charges of giving false reports that hindered the apprehension of the persons guilty of the crime. If convicted he may be imprisoned for three years or fined $1,000, or both. He waived preliminary hearing.

Arrested in Brooklyn for abandoning his family, Frank Parzych, a thirty-year-old narcotic addict, told detectives—and clung to the story after more than twelve hours of questioning—that he was one of a band of seven men who kidnaped the child and that the baby died after the man carrying him down the ladder from the nursery window accidentally dropped him to the ground. The police were inclined to believe this story was false.

Though the authorities of the entire country are of course hunting for the kidnapers and murderers of the baby, New Jersey is still the center of a operations, and the investigation there is in the charge of William H. Stevens, attorney general of the state, and of Prosecutor Erwin Marshall of Mercer county. Neither of these men is optimistic, fearing the case will be added to the list of unsolved crimes because, as Mr. Marshall said, whatever trail there was is now virtually dead. The necessary excessive caution of the police while the child was still thought to be alive lessened the chances for solving the mystery. However, Attorney General Stevens by no means gave up. At a conference of state, federal and county police and investigators in Trenton, a plan was established for co-ordinating all activities in the hunt for the murderers.

ONE of the worst marine tragedies of recent years occurred near the entrance to the Gulf of Aden when the new French liner Georges Philippar of the Messageries Maritimes suddenly burst into flames and was destroyed. The loss of life is uncertain at this writing, but probably about 100 persons perished. The survivors were picked up by several steamships and landed in different ports. Two British vessels took 254 of them to Aden, and they said at least 100 of the thousand odd aboard the doomed ship were trapped in their cabins. Many others lost their lives in the stormy sea. From early reports it appeared that Captain Vicq and his crew did all in their power to save the vessel and its passengers.

PROMINENT bankers and industrial leaders, convinced that public fear and uncertainty have prevented the federal reserve system's policy from taking full effect in the stimulation of recovery of prices and of prosperity, have formed a committee of twelve to aid in putting to work the hundreds of millions of dollars being poured into the market by the system in its program for credit expansion.

These gentlemen gathered in New York at the call of George L. Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve bank of New York, with Owen D. Young as their chairman. The following statement was issued:

"Governor Harrison of the Federal Reserve bank of New York has called together a committee composed of bankers and industrialists for the purpose of considering methods of making the large funds now being released by the federal reserve banks useful affirmatively in developing business.

"Its purpose will also be generally to co-operate with the Reconstruction Finance corporation and other agencies to secure more coordinated and so more effective action on the part of the banking and industrial interests."

SPEAKER GARNER put forth his own plan for depression relief, and it was indorsed by Representative Rainey, leader of the house. Its main features are:

1. Appropriation of $110,000,000 to be expended by the President in his discretion for the relief of destitution.

2. Increase of $1,000,000,000 in the borrowing power of the Reconstruction Finance corporation for loans to state and local governments, corporations and individuals for the purpose of increasing employment.

3. A bond issue of $1,000,000,000 for construction of federal public works in the interest of revival of industry and increase of employment, this expense to be met by a tax of one-third of one cent a gallon on gasoline.

OUR senators are not yet willing to give us real beer, even as part of a plan to bring relief to the unemployed. By a vote of 24 to 61 they rejected Senator Tyding's amendment to the tax bill. This amendment would have legalized 2.75 per cent beer with a tax of 24 cents a gallon upon it which was calculated to yield $200,000,000 annually for amortization of a construction bond issue and an additional $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 that would have allowed that amount to be stricken from the tax bill.

WITH the near approach of the Democratic national convention speculation as to the chances of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt for the nomination grows intense. His pre-convention manager, James A. Farley, still believes he will be nominated on the first roll call. He asserts that Roosevelt will be sure of 691 votes to 463 for all other aspirants, and that before the tally clerk gets down as far as Wyoming and the territories, enough states will change their votes from favorite sons to put the New York governor across the two-thirds line—770 votes.

Owen D. Young

One of the most prominent of the "dark horses" has taken himself definitely out of the running. Owen D. Young, who had a large and hopeful body of supporters, though he never had been an avowed candidate, made the "final" announcement that he would not accept the nomination if it were offered him. In a letter to John Crowley, publisher of the Times of Little Falls, Young's home town, he said his reasons for this decision were "so controlling as not to be open for argument." It was assumed the chief of these reasons was Mrs. Young's ill health.

AL SMITH has by no means surrendered. In a radio address he set forth his personal platform containing planks designed to cure the ills from which the country is suffering. The main features were:

Balance the national budget.

A manufacturers' sales tax to meet the $1,500,000,000 deficit.

Reduction of national expenditures to an "irreducible minimum."

Opposition to a veterans' cash bonus.

Repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

Immediate modification of the Volstead act, to permit wines and beer.

His previously proposed bond issue for public works to relieve unemployment, the bonds to be amortized by proceeds from a wine and beer tax.

Defeat of President Hoover's proposal to relieve unemployment through funds of the reconstruction finance board.

Clothe the President with power to extend, if need be, the moratorium on international debts "until a real solution can be reached."

Suppress "all blocs which bedevil legislation."

SENATOR WATSON of Indiana, majority leader of the senate, does not think congress can possibly get through its necessary business without a summer session before June 14, when the Republican national convention opens, so he proposes to other leaders of both parties that a recess be taken from June 4 to July 11. Speaker Garner demurred, believing all legislation can be disposed of before June 11, so a decision was postponed until June 4. If it appears then that congress can end its work by June 11, the recess plan will not be pressed.

LOU T. REICHERS, a daring American aviator, was the first of this year's crop of would-be transatlantic flyers, and he failed. Hopping off from Harbor Grace, he sought to fly to Paris with a landing at Dublin. But he got lost in the clouds when nearly across the ocean, came down not far from the south end of Ireland, and was picked up by the steamship President Roosevelt, whose commander, Captain Fried, and chief officer, Harry Manning, have rescued many persons from death at sea.

CAPT. ROBERT DOLLAR, the aged and spectacular dean of the shipping and lumber industries of the Pacific coast, died at his home in San Rafael, Calif., after an illness of several weeks. Born in Scotland in 1844, he began work as a lad in Quebec and rose steadily to the dominant position he held at his death.

The coast guard lost its able commandant when Rear Admiral F. C. Billard passed away in Washington, where he resided. He was fifty-eight years old and had been ill two weeks.

Dr. B. J. Cigrand, founder and president of the American Flag Day association, died at his home in Batavia, Ill.

HENRY L. STIMSON, secretary of state, returned from Geneva, says his conversations there convinced him that Europe agrees with the United States on what can and must be done in regard to the far eastern situation and will co-operate with Uncle Sam. He is certain neither Japan nor Russia wants war, and he indicates that the great powers will strive to keep the Manchurian trouble localized, at least for the present. However, the authorities at Washington are rather alarmed by the military situation in Manchuria because of the continued concentration of troops along the frontier.

JAPAN is in a state of ferment and the occidental mind can scarcely figure out what the results may be. Premier Tsuyoshi Inukai was assassinated by a group of young army men and at the same time military terrorists raided and bombed various buildings and did other damage in Tokyo. These events signalled the outbreak of an actual military revolt against the existing government and its course in national and especially international affairs. Inukai's cabinet resigned and plans were made to install Kisaburo Suzuki, new president of the Seiyukai party, as premier. But the representatives of the army served notice that a national cabinet must be formed not based on political parties. The vice chief of staff declared the army would refuse to approve any nomination for war minister in a party cabinet. The constitution provides that the war minister must be a general of the army, so the army can prevent the formation of any ministry that it disapproves. Late dispatches from Tokyo indicated that the army would have its way, and all over the world there was speculation as to what might be the effect on Japan's relations with China and especially with Russia.

T. Inukai

Prince Saionji, last of the elder statesmen, was called to Tokyo to try to effect a compromise.

HARRY J. LEIK, superintendent of Mount McKinley National park in Alaska, and three companions climbed both peaks of the mountain, the first time this ever had been accomplished, and discovered that tragic disaster had befallen a group of scientists headed by Allen Carpe who had attempted to scale the mountain for the purpose of measuring cosmic rays. Carpe himself and Theodore Koven lost their lives. Koven's body was found on Muldrow glacier, and it was certain that Carpe had fallen into a crevasse. The lost leader was regarded as the ablest mountaineer in America. He was working under the direction of Prof. Arthur H. Compton of the University of Chicago, who was expected to join him in Alaska to continue the cosmic ray study.

Allen Carpe

Two other members of Carpe's party, E. P. Beckwith and Percy T. Olton, Jr., both of New York, were safe, encamped on the glacier, Leik reported. Beckwith was seriously ill with fever and was rescued by airplane. N. D. Spadevcockia, also of the party, had left the camp to seek aid and was missing.

POPE PIUS XI issued an encyclical entitled "Charitas Christi" in which he called the world to prayer, penance and mortification to save itself from "the peril of terrorism and anarchy" and "the still graver evils that are threatening." For this purpose he set aside a period of eight days for "reparation" on the octave of the feast of the Sacred Heart, beginning June 3.

Wisdom From a Fly

Phaedrus, an old philosopher, originated the phrase "Adding Insult to Injury," in his humorous tale, "The Bald Man and the Fly." A troublesome fly bit the head of a bald man, who, in attempting to crush the offender, gave himself a sharp blow. Gleefully the fly said: "You wanted to revenge the sting of a tiny insect with death; what will you do to yourself who have added insult to injury?"

Norse Mythology

In Norse mythology Balder was the god of justice and the personification of the brightness and beneficence of the sun. He was the son of Odin and his wife Frigga. According to the legend in the Edda, Frigga undertook to get every living creature and inanimate thing to swear that they would not harm her son Balder, but by mistake she omitted the mistletoe, which took no such oath. After these had pledged, Balder was believed to be invulnerable and the other gods playfully threw stones and even shot arrows at him without injuring him in the least. Finally, however, Loki, the god of evil, fashioned an arrow of a mistletoe twig and had it shot at Balder by the latter's blind twin brother Hodhr, the god of darkness. The arrow pierced Balder's heart and he fell dead.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Energy Is Keynote

Energy supplies power. Properly applied, it makes for progress. This is the law of physics. And it applies to human nature as well. The mental and physical energy you apply to your task is exactly the measure of progress you will achieve.—Grit.

Do not let the thought of first cost stand between you and this vital necessity to your family's well being. You can buy an Automatic Gas Water Heater for 50% less than in 1917. And there is more built-in quality in an Automatic. Terms are as low as $4.85 down and $3.85 a month with a trade-in allowance for your old non-automatic water heater or waterback.

But you must act now. This Special Offer with its liberal terms expires in a few days. Come today or 'phone for our representative.
